A REPORT ON

“Plastic Mukt Meerut”

3rd July 2017

Plastic has found its use in every sector of the economy – beginning from supermarkets to households. It is user-friendly and is in use for almost any purpose. It is because it is cheap and serves a lot of applications. On the other hand, plastic is a non-biodegradable material; that is, it cannot be dissolved or burnt out; it can only be dumped – this means that it remains on the surface of the earth forever; it is not destructible. Owing to this non-biodegradable property of plastic, it is one of the most dangerous pollutants in nature.

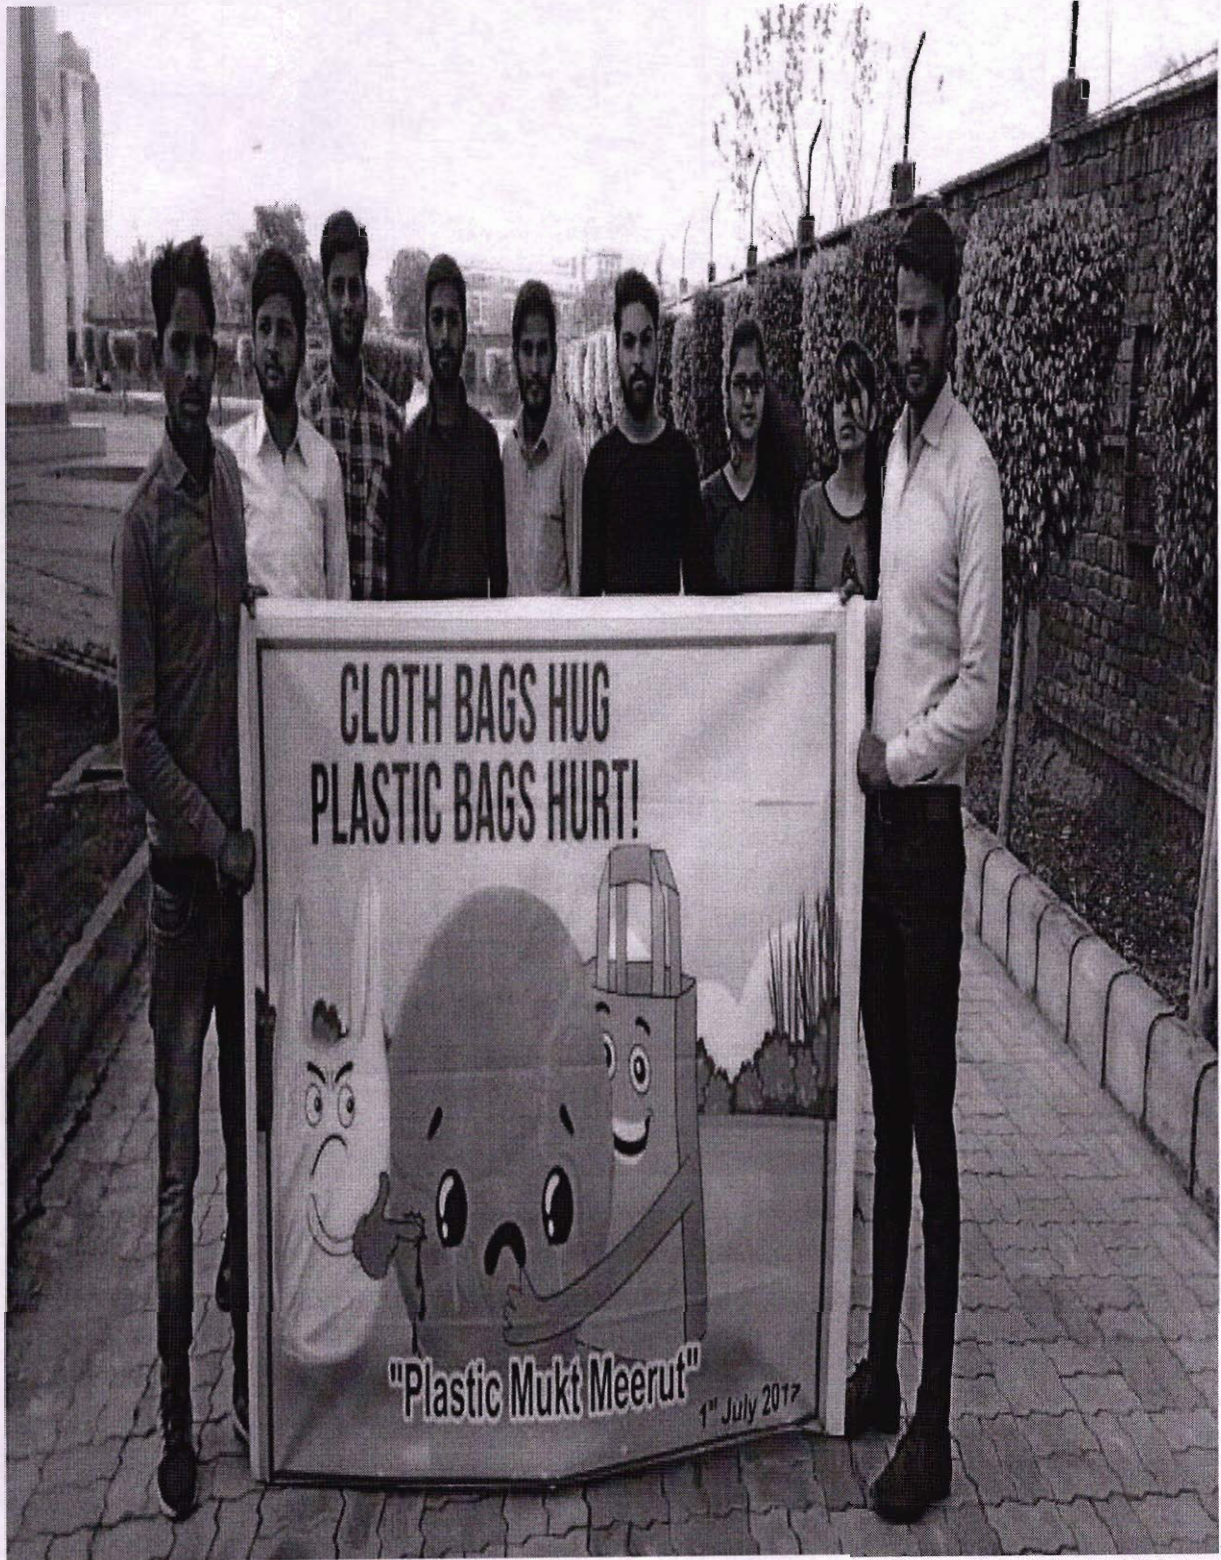

To lower down plastic use in its campus and also send this message to outer world to do the same, MIT have taken many a step. In the same chain to aware about plastic pollution Meerut Institute organized a Rally on 1st July 2017 from college campus to nearby village area. 78 volunteers including student and staffs had enthusiastically participated in this rally and created awareness through slogans and poster. They motivated shopkeepers and common people to avoid use of plastic and use paper and biodegradable alternative. Villagers and shopkeepers showed positive response.

TREE PLANTATION DRIVE

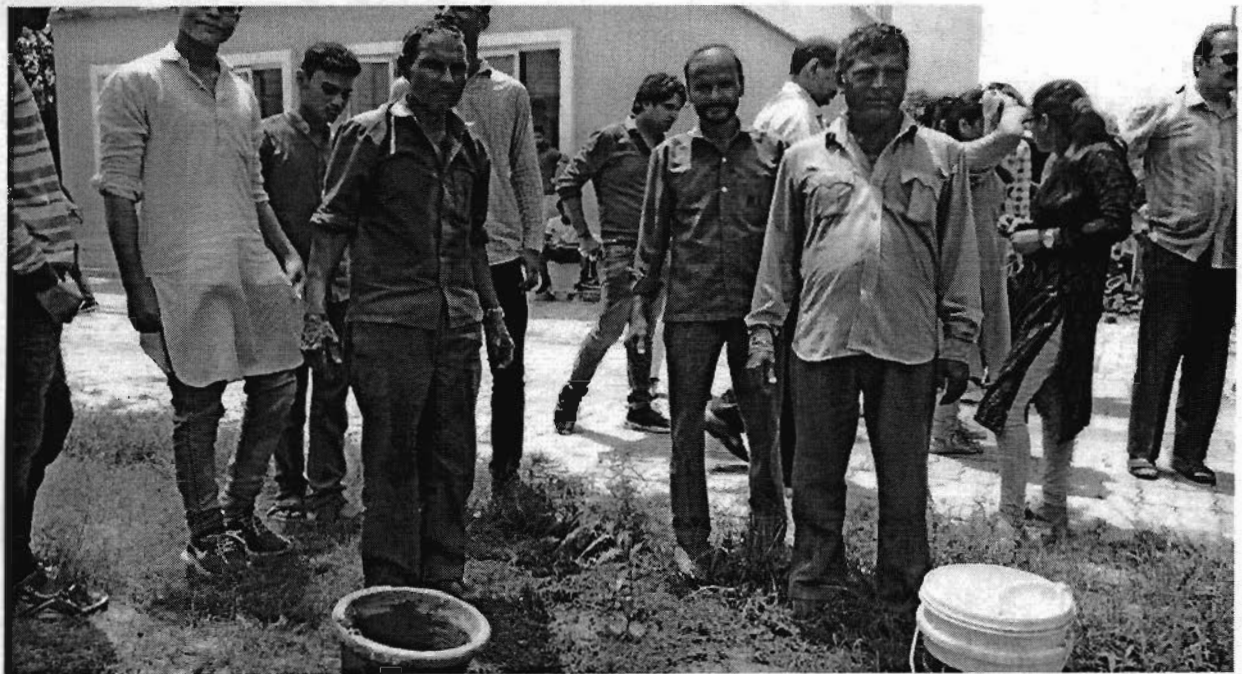

22nd march 2017

The importance of trees in purifying the air, reducing global warming, preventing soil erosion, conservation of water, maintaining the ecological balance, providing natural resources as medicines, habitats for faunal species, providing nutrients to the soil etc. is well known. Unfortunately, the forest cover in the country is dwindling and the reducing number of plants and trees in the city is causing a rise in pollution levels at an alarming rate. Keeping this in mind Meerut Institute of Technology, conducted a tree plantation drive at MIT campus and nearby area on 21st march 2017.

Around 10 Neem trees were planted with some Ashoka and Tulsi saplings by the volunteers. A total of 111 Students of MIT along with the teacher in charge, Mr. Kailash Nath Tripathi enjoyed, not only the tree plantation but also contributed to the environment by removing plastic garbage from the area. By distributing snacks to all present for this noble cause.
